About The Author

Jane Greenoff is largely self-taught, having discovered cross stitch after giving up a 15-year career in nursing to look after her son, James. At that time, in 1982, she and her husband Bill moved to a Cotswold cottage and looked for something appropriate to decorate the walls. A neighbour introduced Jane to counted cross stitch and unaffordable antique samplers, so in 1983 she decided to design and stitch her own. Within six months she was marketing her first commercial kits and thus the Inglestone Collection Kit company was born. From its early beginnings with only £25 in the bank, the company has grown into an internationally successful business. Jane's prolific writing career began in 1987. Her first book, Cross Stitch Castles and Cottages was based on the houses for which Jane was already well known. She has since written a further 15 books. She founded the Cross Stitch Guild in 1996. Four years later, in 2000, the Cross Stitch Guild published its first book Cross Stitching on Linen: Favourite Flowers and launched its own website.
