Description

Block Print for Beginners delivers a contemporary approach for working with traditional tools and media to create custom lino prints for unique works of art. Aspiring artists will first learn how to design and carve their prints using traditional tools and techniques, and then work with various inks to achieve the best print results. With a variety of step-by-step printmaking techniques and projects, from basic block prints to more advanced techniques, such as printing in repeated patterns and creating stationery, wrapping paper, wallpaper, and more, Block Print for Beginners is the perfect guide for artists ready to try out this traditional, time-treasured art form – from uncarved block to beautiful print, over and over again.

About the Author

Elise Young is a creator and printmaker living and working in Toronto, Canada. She makes art under her studio name, Bloomingprint, which she established in 2016. Currently, she also works with several companies as a pattern designer. Her work is mainly inspired by nature, especially florals and botanical elements. She hopes to enrich people's daily lives and provide joyful moments through her artwork. When she isn't carving the block, she loves to travel and spend quality time with her family.
