Description

With a few straightforward strategies and a perfectly practical planner, Tiffany Wood shows you how to jingle your way through the preparations for Christmas, from January to December.

The All-Year-Round Christmas Handbook lends a helping hand to everyone who would like to create a kinder, more mindful and homespun Christmas celebration. Juggling all manner of jobs at a time when expectations of festive fun are sky high means that effective planning and time management are vital. Organizational and creative tasks are divided into months, then weeks and days as you get nearer to Christmas. In the month before Christmas, each week has its own 'dashboard' for different activities – creating, cooking, eating, shopping, entertaining – plus planning pages you can fill in yourself. To save you time, there are recipes for handy cook-ahead dishes, simple meals and store-bought shortcuts. Tiffany shows you how to wrap your gifts with style and make crafty things with the leftover paper. There are also tips from iterations of Santa and Mrs Claus from around the world, with some different traditions you might like to try.

About the Author

Combining creativity with effective organization and practicality is a challenge Tiffany Wood embraces. In her spare time, she enjoys nothing more than making family time and any kind of occasion extra special. Christmas, as she sees it, is the most joyful and creative celebration of all, inspired by the festive traditions of Germany, where she grew up. Tiffany is an Oxford history graduate, married to a doctor, a mother of three, an architectural designer, doodler and illustrator, whose early career in television production luckily taught her the useful art of juggling multiple tasks. She lives in Somerset, UK.
